OFFICIAL PAPER OF LEE COUNTY BY ACT OF SUPERVISORS

Telegraph Sixty-Second Year

DIXON, ILLINOIS SATURDAY MARCH 15, 1913

Dixon Daily Telegraph Thirtieth Year No 63

HIGHER PRICES FOR MILK THIS SEASON

BORDEN FACTORY TO PAY THE FARMERS A HIGHER AVERAGE.

SAME AS ELGIN DISTRICT

Factory Also Offers Bonus of 10c Per Hundred for Milk Testing 3.8 Per Cent Butter Fat.

The Dixon milk factory was today placed on a par with the milk-consuming factories in the Elgin district for the first time in the history of the local plant, the prices being offered the farmers today for the next six months being identical with the contracts being offered farmers in the Elgin district.

This information was brought out when the farmers of this vicinity called at the milk factory office today to contract for their milk for the ensuing six months, the average price being offered for the months of April, May, June, July, August and September being $1.34 1-6, which is 1 1/2 cents higher than the average for the corresponding period last year, the mean price in 1912 being $1.21 2-3.

The prices to be paid at the local factory for every 100 pounds of milk during the coming six months are:

April	1.30
May	1.30
June	1.30
July	1.30
August	1.30
September	1.45

Also Offer Bonus.
In addition to the above high prices the factory is offering a bonus of 10 cents for every 100 pounds of milk delivered to the factory which tests 3.8 per cent or better in butter fat. This bonus will doubtless cause the farmers to pay considerably more attention to their cows, and frequent tests and scientific feeding to bring about a high percentage of butter fat will result.

OPENING OF SHOP FOR WOMEN TODAY

C. C. CAMPBELL'S NEW STORE IS A CREDIT TO DIXON—HIGH CLASS GOODS.

C. C. Campbell today held the opening of his new store on Galena avenue, in the Odd Fellows building, occupying the store space formerly used by the Overstreet jewelry firm. The store was visited by many Dixon women today, who are much pleased to have a store which will cater directly to women exclusively.

The store presents a most attractive appearance. On entering no glaring colors or garish effects jar the sensitive nerves. All is done in soft fawn color and a restful green. The woodwork is beautifully finished oak and the floor is covered with a beautiful green velvet carpet. The walls are painted a soft fawn color and the drapings are in green.

The best of material is used in the goods handled at this store. An elegant line of evening gowns and wraps are carried; suits, coats, negligees, sweaters, dainty lingerie, everything, in fact, which a well-dressed woman wears, and one can buy with perfect confidence, knowing that the best material, workmanship and design is purchased.

The management promises most courteous treatment to each customer and we herald the success of this addition to Dixon's mercantile equipment.

SALEM MOB WOULD HANG RAVISHERS

Two Men Jailed Charged With Attacking 14-Year-Old Girl.

STATE TROOPS REACH SCENE

Sheriff Appeals to Governor Dunne for Aid Who Promptly Orders the Militia Out—Things Quiet But Trouble Menaces.

BULLETIN.

Salem, Ill., Mch. 15.—Special to Telegraph—Sheriff Purcell, after a conference with General Dickson, decided to leave Harrison here but to take Sullen to East St. Louis tonight. A posse of citizens is planning to raid the "blind tigers" of the town tonight and trouble is expected.

Salem, Ill., March 15.—Thomas Cullens and Ernest Harrison are in jail at Salem, charged with raping Dorothy Holt, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Judge C. H. Holt. A mob of 200 surrounded the jail and threatens to wreck vengeance on the culprits. Sheriff Vursell finding that he was unable to cope with the mob appealed to Governor Dunne to send a company of the National Guards. Governor Dunne ordered Company F, Illinois National Guard of Mount Vernon, to report for riot duty at Salem. Two other companies later were called out. Two hundred citizens from Kimmunity went to Salem later to join the mob.

Minister Leads a Raid.
Rev. C. E. Peterson of the Methodist Episcopal church led a mob of about 100 who made a raid on the red light district of the city and destroyed all intoxicating liquors found in the "blind tigers."

At four o'clock in the afternoon Sullens made a statement to the authorities in which he said he had been prompted to commit this crime on the Holt girl at the instigation of Ernest Harrison. Sullens claims that Harrison had a grudge against Judge Holt on account of the latter's diligent and persistent inquiry into the Miller murder.

Sullens also said that Harrison had concocted a plot to kidnap the two Holt children, Ward, aged ten years, and Dorothy, aged fourteen years, and hold them for a ransom. Harrison's fear of investigation of the Miller murder, as alleged in Fullen's statement, leads the authorities to believe that the former is guilty of the crime, and warrants charging him with the murder have been sworn out.

Sheriff Addresses Mob.

Shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon Sheriff Vursell addressed the mob at the jail from the steps of the building and assured the members that Sullens and Harrison would not be removed from the jail.

This announcement caused a dispersement of the mob. A few, however, were left to guard the bastille to see that the men were not removed. It is understood that an agreement has been made for the crowd to gather again and what may result is only a question of what the leaders say.

While the mob was threatening to lynch Sullens a committee was sent to Judge Holt to confer with him about the crime and the proposed mob punishment of the ravisher of his daughter. This committee was composed of L. M. Kagy, Mayor Hull and George W. Smith. Judge Holt informed the committee to delay the lynching in an effort to procure a statement from Sullens in regard to who killed Miller.

State Troops Reach Scene.
Company K of Olney, in charge of Capt. James E. Brant; company G of Effingham, in charge of Capt. W. W. Austin, and company H of Shelbyville, in charge of Capt. William Klausner, have arrived at the scene, and hope to be able to keep the mob in hands.

Major E. P. Clayton of the Fourth regiment from Vandalia is in charge of the troops. Adjutant General Dickson has canceled a business engagement in Chicago, and will also be here to prevent a riot.

It was estimated that the three companies would afford approximately 100 men, as the hurried call makes it impossible to get all the full enrollment here.

Sheriff Vursell feels that he has the situation well in hand notwithstanding hundreds of people are entering the city from the surrounding towns and country.

G. H. T. SHAW WRITES OF BATTLES IN THE CAPITOL OF MEXICO

FORMER DIXONITE WRITES INTERESTING LETTER FOR TELEGRAPH.

LIFE ENDANGERED DAILY

No One Was Safe Night or Day With Mauser Bullets, Shrapnel and Shells Screeching All Around.

George H. T. Shaw, formerly of Dixon, and lately of Mexico City, Mexico, returned to this city a few days ago after weathering the stormy times of the shelling of Mexico City by the rebels, and is now visiting relatives at Lee Center. We requested Mr. Shaw to write us a letter describing conditions in the Republic that we might present it to our subscribers, and he has very kindly done so. With our thanks to him, we offer his letter:

The Dixon Daily Telegraph, Dixon, Illinois.

The military coup d'etat in Mexico City on the morning of February 9th, 1913, came as a thunder bolt from a clear sky to most of the inhabitants. Some of us had known that "something" was brewing but supposed it was to develop about Mar. 1st.

On this particular Sunday morning, my friend E. W. Crane, (both of us being temporary grass widowers) we sort of clubbed together (at my house) left me perusing the Mexican Herald and started out to take a street car for downtown. He came back in a very few minutes with a breathlessly told tale of sounds of firing towards the National Palace, of flying groups of riderless horses, with bloody saddles, etc., etc.

As there were no street cars running, we started to walk down the Paseo de la Reforma, (the principal boulevard of the city) toward the centre of the city. It was quickly evident that something extraordinary was transpiring. People were going about with a strained and expectant air, columns of cavalry, infantry and mounted police were moving in various directions. At this time about 9:30 a. m., there was considerable confusion as to which side the different commands would select. Poor old General Reyes had only an hour or so before marched confidently up to the National Palace, fully expecting to have it turned over peacefully to him as per previous agreement, but instead of a welcome he was met at the door by a pistol-shot full in the face and his followers mown down by machine gun fire.

By the time we reached the Zocalo (the central plaza in front of the National Palace) the fighting was practically over, but there were enough gruesome sights to satisfy an habitual coroner's juror. At the time the machine guns were turned loose with out the least warning, this plaza was crowded with non-combatants, and in 15 or 20 minutes there were some 300 dead and no one knows how many of the wounded who got away.

General Diaz who had been liberated also that morning from prison, as well as General Reyes, was more fortunate than his companion in arms. He at once began to march the Government Arsenal (called the "Ciudadela" or citadel) and after one half hours sharp fighting captured it about noon.

To the people of Mexico City came the gradual realization that although their country had been enduring for over two years the horrors of Civil war and brigandage, which up to date, the city itself had escaped, they were now about to witness some of the real acts of war in their very midst. A sort of spell seemed to close down over the city, every shop was closed, bolted, barred and boarded; and although there were a great many people on the streets they moved and spoke quietly, even the newsboy and bootblacks were subdued, a symptom of fearful portent, and bodies of troops were being moved forward and back, according to the latest whim of their officers, many of whom could not decide as to which side they were to fight on.

By afternoon the situation had cleared to the extent of showing President Madero and some 4,000 or Note in Jar of Preserves Brings Lover of Old Back to Sweetheart.

By H. M. EGBERT.

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.) People said that old Rogers was a miser, but that statement was incorrect. Rogers had been a miser. He had scraped and hoarded during thirty years of labor, so that now, though he was barely fifty years of age, he looked older. But Rogers had retired three months before, thanks to some wisely made investments, and now, with fifteen thousand dollars at his disposal, he was still living on in his little two-room flat on the East Side of New York, and trying to stretch his cramped imagination and plan his life anew.

Bitterly he regretted that he was an old bachelor without a friend or wife, sweetheart or child. His few acquaintances were men whom he had known casually in business, and the district tradesmen and sundry old fellows whom he met twice a week at his chess club over the delicatessen store on Thirteenth street. But Rogers had lived his life exactly as he had planned it, and that is an incredible misfortune which deserves the utmost sympathy.

When Rogers was twenty, a young man newly arrived in the city from the little up-country village, where he had been born, he had made his resolution.

"I shall save every penny I can put by," he said to himself. "I shall save for seven years. And then I shall go home and marry some sweet girl."

But the seven years crept by and found Rogers with the fixed habit of his own creation, which he could not shake off. And long before the seven years were ended Rogers had made a second resolution.

"I shall work seven years longer," he said. "Then I shall go home to Egan. I shall be thirty-four then. That will not be too old to marry. Until I am rich I will not let the any woman down to the hardships of married life on a tiny salary."

The second seven years lengthened into fifteen, twenty, then thirty. And long before they were ended Rogers had forgotten his dream.

But of late, with his fifteen thousand dollars safely stored away in the bank, the dreams had revived. And then something happened—a little, insignificant thing—which brought color and new interest into his life.

Rogers had gone to the delicatessen store of his acquaintance, Holzapfel, to buy something for supper. He cooked his own supper upon a tiny stove in his apartment.

"I think," he said, after he had made his purchases, "that I'll take some preserved fruit."

"Why, Rogers, you're becoming a spendthrift, a regular spendthrift," said Holzapfel jestingly.

Rogers patronized the old German from long habit. Holzapfel had fallen as sadly behind the times as he. His trade had dwindled and dwindled, his stock was incredibly old. Holzapfel nodded for hours in his store while not a single customer entered the dingy little place.

"Well, I've got some preserved peaches," said the old fellow. "But they wasn't put up yesterday, Rogers. I can't say how fresh they are. I'll let you have them for a dime. They're home-grown, and they're worth twenty-five if they are fresh."

Rogers took the peaches and walked out of the store. The utensil was one of those glass jars with a ring round the stopper, such as are used by countrywomen in preserving. They are not seen so much in large cities in these days of canning factories.

The peaches were bad. But that fact had nothing to do with the case. For inside the jar was a little folded square of oiled paper. And in this, perfectly good, was a folded piece of paper, on which was written:

"Lucy Morrell, Egan, N. Y."

That compensated old Rogers for the loss of the peaches. It was one of those little harmless pranks played by country girls who put their names into bottles of fruit preserved by them and destined to go long distances and fall into strangers' hands. Often they had led to correspondence and some times to romance.

Old Rogers racked his brains. He could not remember anyone in Egan named Morrell. But then he had not known everyone even in Egan.

But that evening the loneliness of his flat, the squalor of his surroundings, to which he had been oblivious before, oppressed his spirit; and the very word Egan, written out on the paper, made him homesick for the little town. In the end he sat down and wrote:

"Lucy Morrell: I found your note in the peaches."

Days passed; old Rogers resumed the tenor of his life. He had not found the courage to break loose from his surroundings. But about a week later the postman left a letter in his box. It was the first he had received for months, except bank notices and bills. It was addressed to him in a delicate, feminine writing and inside he read:

"Dear Friend: I got your letter but you didn't say how you liked the peaches."

That was the beginning of a correspondence, and it brought a new happiness into old Rogers' heart. He began to realize what he had missed in the manner merely of human judgment during all those years. He became confidential, and Lucy answered him in the same spirit. He told her of his life, his plans, his dreams. And promptly with the post came Lucy's answer.

But one thing old Rogers had not found courage to tell. He had not told her that he was fifty. For he knew that the romance would be shattered. People thought a man of fifty could not love—the fools!

He had asked for her photograph, but she had not sent it, nor alluded to the matter again. And then old Rogers dared to hope that she might be homely—perhaps she was scarred or maimed, so that he might after all take her and shield her from the world and its cruelty.

Slowly, very slowly, old Rogers hampered out his purpose. He was resolved to put all selfish thoughts aside. He would let her go, let the correspondence cease. But when he came to die the girl in Egan would find that she had fallen heir to all his money. And he would work like a madman all his days to accumulate a fortune for her. So he ceased to answer her.

She wrote less often. But one day came a despairing note in which she confessed something perilously like love. And then old Rogers knew that he had no alternative. So he wrote back, a wild letter such as he would not have been capable of a year before, in which he told her. He told her that he was an elderly man, but that he loved her with all his heart, but had not courage to ask her to be his wife. And so their correspondence must cease, and because he had been a fool and a coward he would suffer in remembering her all the rest of his days.

Then a week passed, and then her answer came. It was a little note, the shortest that she had ever written him except the first time, and it said simply:

"Come up to Egan. The third house from the depot."

On that same afternoon old Rogers drew his money from the bank, paid the rent and gave notice to his landlord, to the utter astonishment and dismay of that gentleman, who had left old Rogers' apartment to mold in decay untouched and unpainted during the past decade. Then he turned his back upon Thirteenth street forever and set forth for Egan.

He reached the little place at five on an autumn afternoon. It had not changed as he had expected. A few houses had sprung up along the railroad, but otherwise it was just as it had been during the past 30 years.

He descended at the depot and walked slowly toward the cottage. There was no mistaking it, that little, old-fashioned building with its clinging ivy and Virginia creeper and the carefully tended lawn and garden. It was just such a place as he would have imagined for an abode for Lucy. So he passed through the latched gate and knocked at the door. A pleasant, gentle-looking lady of about forty years opened to him.

"I am James Rogers," said the visitor simply. "I have come to see your daughter." He said the last word with a tone of interrogation. Yet he felt sure that this was Lucy's mother. This was just such a mother as he would have expected Lucy to have. And yet it was strange that she had never mentioned her in her letters.

"Come in, Mr. Rogers," said the other. "Sit down in the parlor until I light the lamp."

She showed him into a quaint, old-fashioned parlor and then began trimming the wick. But she could not finish. She set the shears down hastily and came up to him. Old Rogers rose.

"I am Lucy Morrell," she said, trembling.

Old Rogers looked at her incredulously, and then . . . It was all so different from what he had expected. But he saw her eyes filled with tears and her head bowed in shame—and then, quite clumsily, for old Rogers had had no such experience during his fifty years—or during the last thirty of them, at any rate—he took her in his arms and kissed her.

He knew then that he loved her the more truly because she brought to him a mind ripened by experience and a love whose strength was only the deeper for the passing of the years. And she had feared as he had feared, when the correspondence began in jest, had ended in earnest. And then his letter had come!

"But there's one thing I can't understand, dearest," he said that evening, as they sat before the fire. "Why did you write your name on the paper and put it in the bottle of peaches? I could imagine that of you as a young girl, but not now."

"My dear," she answered, smiling. "I bottled those peaches 20 years ago."

"Heaven bless old Holzapfel!" was Rogers' remarkable ejaculation.

DEMENTTOWN ... DOINGS

If you're thinking of running for supervisor, constable, justice of the peace or highway commissioner, you'd better get busy. Time for filing nomination papers is darned short.

Mayor W. B. Brinton has been walking with a pronounced limp the past few days, the result of his wife going away. It seems that before leaving for her tour the boss of the Brinton household prepared for his Honor a solution of carbolic acid he used on his feet so he could keep kicking without injuring the (council or his own) members. W. B., of course, did not know that there was but 5 per cent carbolic acid in the preparation, and so when his supply on hand was exhausted recently he went and got another solution.

The new solution evidently had only 5 per cent of anything beside carbolic acid in it, and when the boss of the city poured it on his pedicled extremities he experienced a new thrill—which thrill is the cause for the limp.

Doctors say corsets are just about as dangerous as whiskey. Certainly! One makes a person just about as tight as the other.

There isn't a man living who is such a failure that he doesn't feel he can write in and tell the editor how to run the paper.

Perfectly True.

A Dixon woman who, by the way, had not been in Chicago since the C. & N. W.'s handsome new terminal station was built, boarded the Sterling passenger one day this week and soon after leaving Dixon Conductor James Wheat came through for the tickets. Now it so happened that this lady knew Mr. Wheat when he lived in Dixon, and accordingly she asked him all about the beauties of the new station of which she had heard so much. She expressed a desire to visit it in every department, and every time Mr. Wheat went through the train she kept asking about it.

Finally, in addition to pumping the conductor, the lady turned her battery of questions on Art Hagerman, the brakeman, and finally asked him:

'Are you sure,' Mr. Brakeman, that this train will stop at the new terminal?'

To which the obliging brakeman replied: 'Well, ma'am, I'm not exactly sure the train will stop there, but you can bet there'll be a helvabump if it doesn't.'

And the best part of the whole story is that the lady tells it on herself.

JUDGE DICKINSON NEAR FIST FIGHT

Takes Exception to Statement of Attorney Lindabury—
Asks Him Outside.

J. P. MORGAN JR., TAKES STAND

Gives Testimony Before Steel Trust
Quiz Regarding Documents Between His Firm and Companies
Merged With Corporation.

New York, March 15.—Judge J. M. Dickinson, counsel for the government in its dissolution suit against the United States Steel corporation, invited Richard V. Lindabury, counsel for the steel trust, to step into the hall and receive a thrashing during the hearing of the suit here. J. P. Morgan, Jr., sat within five feet of the attorneys while they were arguing and smiled during the heated discussion.

Clash Over Letter.

The argument arose over the copy of a letter written by Andrew Carnegie to J. P. Morgan & Co. on February 2, 1901, which the government did not place in evidence. The letter referred to the agreement under which Carnegie turned his properties over to the steel corporation at an enormous profit.

Edward S. Pegram, chief clerk for the Morgan firm, was on the witness stand. During his examination of the witness, Attorney Lindabury produced the Carnegie letter. It had been handed to the government by Mr. Pegram, but had not been placed in evidence.

Mr. Lindabury asked counsel for the government if they did not wish to put the letter in evidence. Judge Dickinson replied that the letter was only a copy and that no copies had been placed in evidence, as he did not regard them as correct copies.

This brought a vigorous protest from Mr. Lindabury, who asserted that Judge Dickinson had no basis for making such a statement.

Dickinson Becomes Obstreperous.
Judge Dickinson jumped up from his chair and ran around to confront Mr. Lindabury.

"Do you say my statement is false?" asked Judge Dickinson. "I won't permit you to say that it is false. If you will step outside I'll let you know."

John A. Brown, the referee, stepped between the two men and said that the hearing must continue in a quiet manner.

Morgan sat an impassive witness while the two men glared at each other. The banker had a seat back of the witness.

"Mr. Lindabury cannot make such a statement about me," said Judge Dickinson. "If you mean to say I have no basis for the statement, your statement is false. I have made no reflection against the counsel for the defense. Time and again innuendoes have been made against me and I won't put up with it."

Judge Dickinson resumed his seat, but he was still trembling with rage when he began to question Mr. Morgan.

J. P. Morgan, Jr., on Stand.

Mr. Morgan was questioned by Judge Dickinson regarding documents and contracts between the firm of J. P. Morgan and companies which became part of the steel trust. Mr. Morgan said he had looked for these papers, but had been unable to find them.

MENACE BIG RESERVOIR

Suffragette Found in London's New Water Works.

Woman Is Promptly Arrested—Young School Teacher Smears Home Office With Paint.

London, England, March 15.—An alleged suffragette plot to wreck the great new water reservoir at Chingford in the northeast of London, which King George is to open today, was frustrated by the arrest of a woman who was concealed in a recess of the works. She refused to give her name or any other information. The great reservoir has an area of 416 acres and four and one-half miles of embankment. Its excavation cost over $2,500,000. It is intended to supply about half of London.

Marjorie Masters, school teacher and militant suffragette, threw a pot of green paint through a window of the home office, scattering the liquid over several desks and the floor in the bureau. She was immediately arrested.

Many windows at the home office have been broken by the suffragettes but this is the most extreme measure yet used by the women in attacking that bureau.

Financier Spends the Day Indoors at Rome.

Change of Climate Said to Have Benefited Banker—Illness Result of Business Worries.

Rome, March 15.—J. Pierpont Morgan spent the day indoors, but his diet, which previously consisted chiefly of milk and soda biscuits, was altered to suit the cooler climate of Rome. He now has oatmeal and minced veal.

Mr. Morgan is reported to have benefited by the change of climate. Doctor Dickson, who was appointed by the Morgan family, and who is now attending the financier, issued a signed statement saying that Mr. Morgan's present illness was due to business strain, which began with the financial crisis of 1907 and culminated in the vexatious investigations of the Pujo committee. A cold upset the digestive organs and finally resulted in an attack of nervous prostration, from which Mr. Morgan is now convalescing.

Doctor Dickson adds that after a rest in Rome Mr. Morgan will go to Aix les Bains, where it is expected a further rest will completely restore his health.

SMITH WINS FROM WELLS

English Champion Knocked Out in Second Round by Ex-Sailor.

New York, March 15.—Bombardier Wells, heavy-weight champion of Great Britain, was knocked stiff at Madison Square garden by "Gunboat" Smith, an entry in the white horse stakes from California. Wells was dead to the world after a third knock-down from the juggernaut right of the one-time marine and for five minutes after the finishing blow he was helpless in his corner, while his seconds doused him with ice water and pled him with smelling salts. While the bout lasted it was sensational, for Wells was the favorite and few in the house thought that Smith would be able to stand up against the skill and heavy punching of the big blond Briton.

DISBAND ARKANSAS MILITIA

Under these orders, Arkansas will be the only state in the Union in less than a week which has no militia.

11 DROWN WHEN SHIPS CRASH

Steam Lighter Wyckoff Sunk in Collision With Unknown Vessel Off Governor's Island—Men Were Asleep in Their Bunks.

Chicago, March 14.—Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property was destroyed, scores of persons injured, houses torn from foundations and towns flooded in Illinois by a severe wind, rain and electrical storm which swept the state during the night. The whole middle west and south was affected by the storm, which in the southern states assumed the proportions of a cyclone and tornado.

Wire service was crippled seriously in many sections when telegraph poles were uprooted and blown away. Thirteen persons were killed by the storm in the extreme southern states. Hundreds of basements were flooded in Chicago and traffic was tied up on account of the deluge which in some sections amounted almost to a cloudburst. The wind storm, however, did the greatest damage in the southern section of the state.

Wind with a velocity of 50 miles an hour swept over Peoria, Woodford, Tazewell, Jersey, Greene and Cass counties, overturning houses and tearing trees up by the roots. Both telephone and telegraphic communication was practically at a standstill in Peoria, where thousands of dollars' worth of damage was done in the heart of the business district. Small buildings were wrecked and timbers were carried through the air like leaves.

Several Persons Killed.

The 13 persons killed were victims of the cyclone which swept Louisiana, Texas, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee. Three were killed and fifteen injured when the town of Provencal, La., was practically wiped out. One man was killed and many injured at Brookeland, Tex. A property loss of $200,000 was reported in Sabine county, Texas. Much damage was done at Houston.

A passenger train was blown from the track near Nashville, Tenn., by a wind storm that plowed its way across the center of the state, destroying homes, killing several persons and wrecking a number of public buildings and factories.

Reports from South Dakota say the most severe snowstorm of the winter is raging. The temperature had dropped to the freezing point and the blizzard, driven by a heavy northeast gale, badly crippled railroad traffic. Pierre was practically isolated.

Eleven Drowned When Ships Crash.

New York, March 14.—In a collision with an unidentified steamship believed to have been a tramp, the steam lighter Wyckoff, bound from Perth Amboy to some point up the sound, was sunk about 600 feet off the south end of Governor's Island. Eleven members of a crew of twelve were lost. The accident occurred shortly after ten o'clock. The one man rescued was a negro deck hand. He is suffering from immersion and is in a hospital on Staten Island.

HOLD UP U. S. MARINES

Bandits Menace Troopers in New York Saloon.

One Holds Soldiers at Bay With Pistol While Other Robs Register.

New York, March 14.—Twenty United States marines were held up by three taxicab bandits in the saloon of John Bodener, in High street, Brooklyn. While two of them with pistols kept the marines at bay, the third struggled with Frank O'Rourke, the bartender, slashing him with a knife. He finally reached the cash register, from which he took all the cash, $20. Bodener had made his daily deposit in a bank two hours earlier. The trio then escaped in the taxicab in which they had arrived at the saloon. One of them flourished his pistol at the crowd that had gathered outside. So sudden was the entrance of the men into the saloon that none of the marines had a chance to offer resistance.

Miss Florence Heath, T. N., is in Freeport on duty at the hospital in that city.

R. V. Thorne has been seriously ill and is under the care of a trained nurse. His advanced age makes his recovery uncertain.

Mrs. Grace Scott entertained the Arbutus Embroidery club at her home Thursday afternoon. A fine time was enjoyed.

The Card club was entertained at the Berry home Wednesday evening.

Miss Myrtle Kenney expects to spend Saturday in Freeport.

A number from here attended a box social at the school house near Middlebury Friday evening, of which Miss Wagner is teacher. The trip was made on the electric car, leaving at 7 p. m.

Mrs. Garrison has been spending a few days in Watertown.

A heavy rain fell Thursday evening and it stormed very hard for some time during the early evening. The wind was very strong and created havoc in many places. However, the snow has been cleared and there is hope that spring and warm weather will put in an appearance before long.

Chas. Davis is having his house wired for electric lights. The electricians began work Wednesday. The chorus choir on the Congregational church held a rehearsal at the Vaughan home Thursday evening.

Dr. R. V. Moore was operated upon at a Freeport hospital recently.

Rev. Kempster and Mr. Frost who have been patients at the hospital, have recovered and were able to be taken to their homes at Lee Center the first of the week.

NORTH DIXON HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

All contributions to this part of the Dixon Telegraph should be sent to Robert Fulton, Jr., Department Editor.

Some Class.

The solid geometry class is busy this week decomposing polygons.

A Mean Trick.

Someone on the senior side of the room spilled a few coins on Friday. It was over ten minutes before the room recovered from the shock. There should be a law against such practice, as the unfamiliar sound is liable to induce heart failure.

How Nice!

At the expense of the Rumford Baking Powder company the high school was presented with a nice bunch of bottles. On the next day Sherwood Dixon's desk contained exactly thirty-seven (37). We wonder how they got there.

Out for a Walk?

Two S. S.'ers and two others were seen at 4:30 Thursday morning hiking for the east. What does it mean?

The Freshmen.

The Freshies have at last organized. At an election on Monday Ken Church was chosen president, receiving 43 votes out of 27. His large majority is easily accounted for as Boob Lenox and Don Church were ballot box tenders. A recount has been demanded to learn who are the other officers and up to this date they are still in doubt.

The Juniors.

Another big party was pulled off, this time in an old house. The hosts for the affair were Dick Shuck and Woodworth. 'Capitalists' and 500 played on a washtub were features.

How Useful.

Herb Smith increased the school's learning about 200 per cent with his current event Tuesday.

We wonder if Herbert has ever been there.

HARMON NOTES.

Harmon, Mich. 14—Special to Telegraph. The Catholic church and parsonage are about completed and will probably be ready for use by the end of the week.

Mrs. Will Kugler is entertaining the elderly ladies of town today.

John Rhodenbaugh is moving into his new home today.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

There will be special music at the Congregational church Sunday evening. Beside the boys' quartet there will be solos by Donald Anderson, boy soprano, and Earl Senneff, trombone.

SERMON ON LIVINGSTONE.

The 100th anniversary of David Livingstone will be celebrated at the Baptist church at the Sunday morning service by a sermon which will give the essential features of the life and the character of the world hero.

The sermon subjects for the next four Sunday evenings:

March 16—Practical Atheism.

March 23—The Mayor of Sodom.

March 30—The Tables Turned.

April 6—Lively Stones.

There will be special music by the chorus choir.

SELLS GOOD COWS.

G. H. T. SHAW WRITES
OF BATTLES IN THE
CAPITOL OF MEXICO

5,000 troops in possession of the National Palace and General Diaz with about 900 men in the Citadel. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon with two friends I walked up to the Citadel, and although a few cannon had been placed at street corners and sentinels were out, we had no difficulty in passing within the grounds. It was an inspiring sight to see this handful of men calmly going about their preparations for the standing off of ten times their number (Madero had 9,000 men by Tuesday.)

All day Monday and Monday night President Madero was gathering into the city every soldier he could get by train or trail, and Tuesday morning as Mr. Crane and I were on our way down town a friend stopped his automobile long enough to say that he had just left Bach's Restaurant, where the commander of the Madero forces, Gen. Huerta, had told him that as soon as he finished taking his coffee, he was going over to Take the Citadel. Within the hour he found the Citadel a much hotter article than his coffee and very much harder to take.

The fighting opened in earnest at 10:15 a. m., Tuesday and continued almost without cessation until the afternoon of the next Tuesday. Both sides were well equipped with small arms, machine guns and cannon. The storm center of the fighting was right in the densely populated part of the city, the fighting had hardly begun until work was created for the flying automobiles of the Red Cross Blue Cross and White Cross societies.

From the roof of the American club we watched the fighting for awhile until the machine guns began to sputter in our direction. I might add right here that I was the first one to go down but in going down, I put foot on every step, which is more than my friend Street and the others can claim, for they evidently were striving desperately for some sort of a record. Speaking of records, I claim that during the ten days' fighting (and nights) that I broke all records, amateur or professional, for the following stunts:

1st. 100 yard dash in 8 seconds (this event is usually started with a pistol shot but a battery of cannon let loose suddenly behind one gives the sprinter at least 2 seconds advantage in ground covered in the first jump.)

2nd. 200 yard dash, a big city block, including the turning of the corner, 20 1-100 seconds.

3rd. Hop, skip, and jump, running start (used in crossing bullet swept streets) width of street 60 feet. Record repeated several times and measurements guaranteed, hop 10 feet, skip 20 feet, and the jump as a big shell explodes close behind—35 feet 9 1-2 inches to well behind the 'dobe' brick corner house.

4th. Fat man's record for lurking, crawling and sneaking along behind low walls.

5th. When forced to go out foraging my stories to sentinels as to wounded friends, widows and orphans to be succored, etc., etc., would surely give me a front seat in Mr. Roosevelt's Ananias club.

You asked me to relate some personal experiences; they came too thick and fast to record and only a few of the most startling remain in mind. A person got used to the 'ping' of the Mausser bullet, the incessant 'riveting-hammer' racket of the machine guns and even the rocking jar of the heavy artillery working steadily away a block or so distant, but no one could help ducking when a big shell would go off close by. Everybody who from necessity or pure curiosity was on the streets, ran a constant danger of being hit by the flying bullets but the number of Americans killed and wounded was remarkably small. A flat-building called 'Gore Court' housing some thirty American families was pierced by shells from a federal battery not three blocks away. The place was evacuated hurriedly and under fire, but fortunately no one was hurt. The American club was struck by a number of explosive shells. A friend of mine was in his room in the Club one morning and about to shave but hot water not coming promptly he decided to go along down stairs. While he was only half way down stairs a shell came through the side of the building, passed about a foot over his head and exploded in his room. The shrapnel literally 'peppered' the mirror and wall where he would have been standing if he had remained to shave.

My private office was perforated by Mausser, rapid-fire gun and shrapnel bullets. There were over 100 bullet holes and two shell holes in the walls of the room. Office furniture was shattered, maps punctured and the room a regular wreck. My house was of the old fashioned adobe wall type with walls 2 1/2 feet thick and a brick pavement sort of roof, so we were safe from bullets when inside of the house and away from the windows, but not from the shells. Fortunately although shells exploded over the house, none happened to strike the building before bursting.

Our milkman for reasons that I no doubt, thought were sufficient, failed to furnish us with milk, so I went across to a temporary milk depot adjoining the American embassy about two blocks away. One day the milk man's little boy, a lad about 12 years old, came over to the house with me to take back the empty bottles. In returning he was struck down and died the following day at the American hospital, where a friend of mine took him in his automobile. It seemed pitiful, he was such a bright and willing little fellow.

When the huge city prison called 'Belem' was shelled and most of the 5,000 prisoners turned loose, we had a number of them call at the house for something to eat, and everybody expected that during the night there would be a lot of robberies but the prisoners all seemed to be scared and their only aim was to get away as soon and as far as possible from the sound of the firing. A great many of them were killed in the streets. The most of the robberies and 'hold ups' in our neighborhood were done by soldiers. My man servant found a soldier clear inside our house. He said that he was hungry and was looking for something to eat, but as he had on two vests and a coat belonging to us he was shucked and shunted to the street with scant ceremony. The bulk of the Mexican army, (probably 90 per cent) is composed of convicts who are sentenced to serve in the army instead of going to jail.

I'll not try to give details nor statistics of the sadder side of the ten days of fighting in the densely populated city. Some of my friends took pictures of some terrible sights but the pictures I took, and some of which I send along are to show characteristic examples of the destructive work of the artillery and rifle firing. The houses show rents made by explosive shells which in numerous cases were thrown without due warning being given.

After the fighting was over, as all railroads running northerly from the city were cut, Mr. Street and I took train for Vera Cruz and a boat from there to New Orleans. It was upon landing at New Orleans that the saddest affair of the whole time occurred. The vigilant U. S. Customs officers took all of the good Mexican cigars Mr. Street had brought along to give as presents to friends in Dixon and they even confiscated his pipe. This was too much however, even for Mr. Street's good nature and he risked imprisonment by calmly recapturing his faithful nicotine friend after it had been taken possession of in the name of the U. S. government.

In conclusion let me add a word or two as to the Mexican question as it affects the U. S. government. In the first place let me say that all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, practically all of the American citizens in Mexico have for the last two years talked and worked against armed intervention by the U. S., they even are hoping now that the present military government (it is frankly so) will be able to bring about a restoration of the former peaceful conditions throughout the country, but they also realize that during the Madero regime—the political conditions of the country virtually created a school of brigandage that now has enrolled thousands of apt scholars; that three powerful states, Sonora, Aguas Calientes and Coahuila are in open revolt as against the president now acting, and that last but not least, English, German, French, and Spanish nationals are insisting that if the U. S. will not aid Mexico (forcibly if necessary) to protect the lives and property of foreigners, then the Monroe Doctrine should be cancelled and those nations permitted to protect their people in such ways as they might see fit.

With these points in view not only Americans in Mexico but the better informed Mexican citizens realize that Mexico now has her last chance to 'make good' in arranging peace and it is sincerely to be hoped that they will do so.

Any Player Piano Is Better Than None—

We mean it. You need music. It is as necessary to your mental well being as rest and relaxation are to your body.

Yes, any player piano is better than none but the best is still better.

Get a player piano in your home that you'll be proud of—a player piano that brings with it when it passes your doors, the best music in the world and the best method of rendering that music.

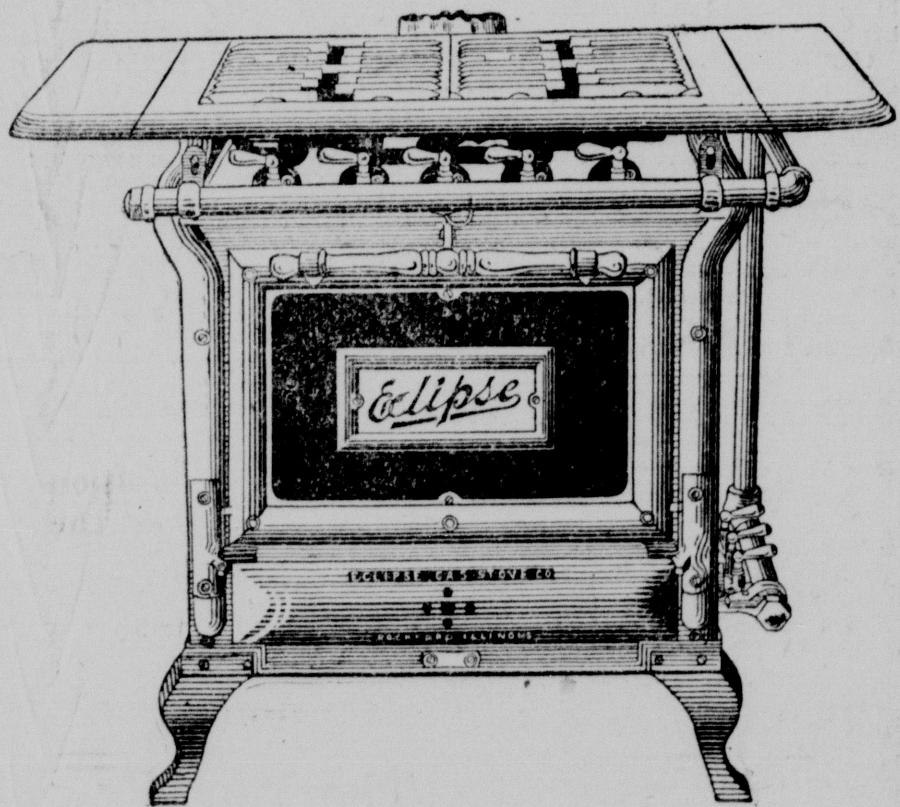

And in a player piano, the thing you desire most is human playing. Scope—technique—expression—possibilities. In the Apollo Player Piano you have these things—all of them. The Apollo touches down on the keys—just like a human being—like a great pianist.

The Apollo Player Piano accents the melody or omits it altogether. You'll not find this feature in any other player piano irrespective of price or make.

The Transposing Device which enables you to play in any desired key for accompaniment purposes. This is another Apollo feature. You'll find every feature in the Apollo that any other instrument possesses and many that are exclusive with it.

Come in and compare Apollo music with human music. It is the same because it is produced in the same way and by the same methods.

I B Club Met

The Junior girls basketball team or their club met at the home of Miss Erma Drew Thursday evening. It was to be a hard time party and the house was decorated like a barn. Lanterns were used instead of gas lights and games were played on boxes. The girls enjoyed themselves very much in playing games and cards. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The club is becoming more of a success at each meeting. They intend to hold a large banquet at the close of school.

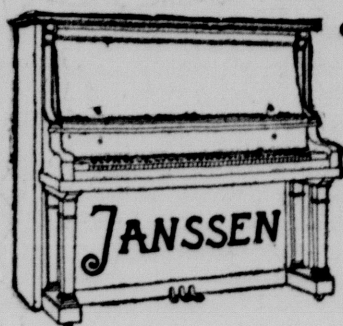

A Short Talk.

He explained numerous ways in which the boy and girl can become healthy and be bright students. He also described and explained how bad habits ruin the body and intellectual power of students. His speech was closed by a very good explanation of the use of tobacco and the chewing of gum.

General Randolph was evidently in a great hurry. Public affairs of great moment pressed upon him, and it was an evidence of the interest he took in the case of Captain Thorne that he gave him even a minute of his valuable time. He had come on horseback, and everybody could see that he was anxious to get through with his appointed task and get away.

"Ah, sergeant," he said, answering the latter's salute as he brought the guard to attention, and then his eye fell upon Captain Thorne. "You have the prisoner, have you?"

"Just taking him out, sir," answered the sergeant, saluting again.

"To prison?"

"No, sir."

"Where then?"

"To execute the sentence of the court, sir."

"Oh!" exclaimed the general, looking hard at the sergeant. "He has had his trial, has he?"

But Arrelsford, who chafed at thus being left out of the game, now stepped over and took up the burden of the conversation before the sergeant could reply.

"We have done everything according to regulation, sir," he said, saluting in a rather cavalier manner. He did not like General Randolph. If it had not been for his interference, the affair would have been settled long ago, and he still cherished a grudge against the latter for having arrested a man so important as the trusted agent of the secret service. "The findings have gone to the secretary."

"Ah!" said General Randolph blandly. He did not like Mr. Arrelsford any better than Mr. Arrelsford liked him.

"Yes, sir."

"And he was found guilty, I presume?"

"Certainly, sir."

"And what are you going to do with him?"

"There is no time for a hanging now, and the court has ordered him shot."

"Oh, indeed. And what were the charges?"

"Conspiracy against our government and the success of our arms, by sending a false and misleading dispatch containing forged orders, was the particular specification."

"Well," said General Randolph, "I regret that the court has been misinformed."

"What!" cried Arrelsford, in great surprise. "The testimony was very plain."

"Yes, indeed, sir," interposed the sergeant.

"Nevertheless," returned the general, "the man is not guilty of that charge. The dispatch was not sent."

Now Edith Varney had scarcely moved. She had expected nothing she had hoped for nothing from the advent of the general. At best it would mean only a little delay. The verdict was just, the sentence was adequate, and the punishment must and would be carried out. She had listened, scarcely apprehending, busy with her own thoughts, her eyes fastened on Thorne, who stood there so pale and composed. But at this remarkable statement by General Randolph she was suddenly quickened into life. A low exclamation broke from her lips. A hope, not that his life might be saved, but that it might be less shameful to love him, came into her heart. Wilfred stepped forward also.

The terse statement of the general had caused a great deal of excitement and commotion in the room. Only Thorne preserved his calmness. He was glad that Edith Varney had learned this, and he was more glad that she had learned it from the lips of the enemy, but it would make no difference in his fate. He was not guilty of that particular charge, but there were dozens of other charges for which they could try him, the punishment of any one of which was death. Besides, he was a spy caught in the Confederate lines, wearing a uniform not his own. It was enough that the woman should learn that he had not taken advantage of her action; at least she could not reproach herself with that.

"Why, general," began Arrelsford, greatly dismayed. "I hardly understand what you mean. That dispatch—I saw him myself."

General Randolph turned on him quickly.

"I say that dispatch was not sent," he roared, striking the table with his hand. "I expected to arrive in time for the trial. There is one here who can testify. Lieutenant Foray?"

From among the group of staff officers who had followed General Randolph, Lieutenant Foray stepped forward before the general and saluted.

"Did Captain Thorne send out that dispatch after we left you with him in the office an hour ago?" asked the older officer.

"No, sir," answered Foray promptly, glancing from Arrelsford's thwarted and flushed and indignant countenance to Edith Varney's face, in which he saw the light of a great illumination was shining. "No, sir," he repeated; "I was just about to send it by his orders, when he countermanded it and tore up the dispatch."

"And what dispatch was it?"

"It was one signed by the secretary of war, sir, removing Marston's division from Cemetery Hill."

"You hear, gentlemen," said the general, and, not giving them time to answer, he turned again to Foray. "What were Captain Thorne's words at the time?"

"He said he refused to act under that commission, and crumpled it up and threw it away."

"That will do, Lieutenant," said General Randolph triumphantly. He turned to Arrelsford again. "If you are not satisfied, Mr. Arrelsford, I beg to inform you that we have a dispatch from General Chesney at the front, in which he says that no orders were received from here. He got an uncompleted dispatch, but could not make anything out of it. Marston's division was not withdrawn from Cemetery Hill, and our position was not weakened in any way. The attack there has failed." There was a low murmur of astonishment from the group of men in the room. Edith Varney did one significant thing. She made two steps in Thorne's direction. That young man did not dare to trust himself to look at her. "It is quite plain," continued the general, "that the court has been acting under an error. The president of the Confederacy is, therefore, compelled to disapprove the finding, and it is set aside. He happened to be with the secretary when the finding came in."

Arrelsford made one last desperate effort.

"General Randolph," he said, and, to do him justice, he did not lack courage, "this was put in my hands, and—"

"I take it out of your hands," he said curtly. "Report back to the war office, or the secret service office, with my compliments, and—"

"But there are other charges upon which he could be tried," persisted Arrelsford. "He is a spy anyway, and—"

"I believe I gave you your orders, Mr. Arrelsford," interrupted the general, with suspicious politeness.

"But hadn't I better wait and see—"

"By God, sir," thundered Randolph, "do I have to explain my orders to the whole secret service of the Confederacy? Don't wait to see anything. Go at once, or I will have you escorted by a file of soldiers."

Arrelsford would have defied the general if there had been the least use in the world in doing it, but the game was clearly up for the present. He would try to arrange to have Thorne rearrested and tried as a spy later. Now he could do nothing.

He walked out of the room, pride enabling him to keep up a brave front, but with disappointment and resentment raging in his heart. He did not realize that his power over Thorne had been withdrawn. In the great game that they had played, he had lost at all points. They all watched him go, not a single one in the room with sympathy, or even pity.

"Now, sergeant," said the general, as they heard the heavy hall door close; "I want to speak to the prisoner."

"Order arms!" cried the sergeant. "Parade rest!" As the squad assumed these positions in obedience to his commands, the sergeant continued, "Fall out, the prisoner."

Thorne stepped forward one pace from the ranks, and saluted the general. He kept his eyes fixed upon that gentleman, and it was only the throbbing of his heart that made him aware that Edith Varney was by his side. She bent her head toward him; he felt her warm breath against his cheek as she whispered:

"Oh! Why didn't you tell me? I thought you sent it, I thought you—"

"Miss Varney!" exclaimed the general in surprise.

But Edith threw maidenly reserve to the winds. The suddenness of the revelation overwhelmed her.

"There is nothing against him, General Randolph, now; is there? He didn't send it. There's nothing to try him for!" she said.

General Randolph smiled grimly at her.

"You are very much mistaken, Miss Varney," he answered. "The fact of his being caught in our lines without his proper uniform is enough to hang him in ten minutes."

Edith caught her breath with her hand with a sharp exclamation, but General Randolph turned to speak to the prisoner.

"Captain Thorne," he said, "or Lewis Dumont, if that is your name; the president is fully informed regarding the circumstances of your case, and I needn't say that we look upon you as a cursed dangerous character. There isn't any doubt whatever that you ought to be shot right now, but, considering the damned peculiarity of your behavior, and that you refused to send out that dispatch when you might have done so, we've decided to keep you out of mischief some other way. You will be held a prisoner of war."

Captain Thorne was almost too dazed to realize the purport of the decree. He mechanically saluted, and from his lips broke a murmured:

"Thank you, sir."

The general looked at him severely, and then, seeing Edith Varney, turned away and engaged in conversation with his staff. His intention was obvious, and Edith immediately embraced the opportunity.

"Oh!" she said; "that isn't nearly so bad as death," and before them all she stretched out her hand to him.

"No!" quivered Thorne in a low voice.

"No," she said, forcing herself to look at him. "After a while perhaps—some time—"

"Oh!" said Thorne. "Some time? If it's some time, that's enough."

Mrs. Varney, having succeeded in getting Howard quiet and composed, had been in the room since the advent of General Randolph.

"Mamma," said Edith, "won't you speak to him, too?"

Mrs. Varney approached him, but Wilfred was quicker.

"I would like to shake hands with you," he said, with boyish enthusiasm.

"What, again?" said Thorne, smiling. "All right." He stretched out his hand. "Go ahead."

"And so would I," said Caroline, following the lead of her boy lover.

"Don't be afraid now," said Wilfred. "Everything will be all right. They will give you a parole, and—"

"A parole!" said Caroline. "Goodness gracious, they will give you hundreds of them, I am sure."

But General Randolph turned once more.

"One moment, please," said the officer. As he came forward, the others fell back. Only Edith Varney kept her place close by Thorne's side.

"There is only one reason on earth why the president has set aside a certain verdict of death. You held up that false order and made a turn in our favor. You are not to be tried as a spy, but held as a prisoner of war. We expect you to make that turn complete and enter our service."

"Never," replied Thorne instantly. "That's impossible, sir."

"You can give us your answer later," said the general.

"You have it now."

"You will be kept in close confinement until you come to our terms," continued the older officer.

"You make me a prisoner for life, then."

"You will see it in another light before many days, and it wouldn't surprise me if Miss Varney had something to do with a change in your views."

"You are mistaken, General Randolph," quickly interposed Edith. "I think he is perfectly right."

"Oh, very well," said the general, smiling a little. "We will see what a little prison life will do. Sergeant?"

"Yes, sir."

"I have turned the prisoner over to Major Whitfield. He requests you to take the prisoner to his office, where he'll take charge of him."

"Very good, sir," answered the sergeant.

"What is it?" whispered Thorne to Edith. "Love and goodby?"

"No," answered the girl; "only the first." She stopped and looked at him, her face flushed, her heart throbbing, her eyes shining gloriously. "And that every day, every hour, every minute, until we meet again."

"Thank God," whispered Thorne. "Until we meet again."

"Attention!" cried the sergeant. "Carry arms! Left face! Fall in, the prisoner! Forward—march!"

AFTERWORD.

And so the great adventure is over, the story is told, and the play is played. It is hard to tell who lost and who won. It made little difference in the end that Marston's division had not been withdrawn, and that the attack on Cemetery Hill had failed. It made little difference in the end that Arrelsford had been thwarted in his attempts to wreak his vengeance upon Thorne. It made little difference in the end that Thorne refused to enter the service of the Confederacy, preferring imprisonment for life. For the days of the Confederacy were numbered. It was even then tottering on the verge of its grave, in spite of the brave front it kept up.

Three days after the events of that night, and Richmond had fallen, and presently the last of the Confederate defenders halted at Appomattox. The stars and bars were hauled down for the last time. The prisoners were released. There was a quiet wedding in the old house. Howard, happily recovering from his wounds, was present. General Varney himself gave away the bride—reluctantly, to be sure, yet he did. Wilfred took the place of the brother of Captain Thorne—to continue to call him by the name he had assumed—and acted as the best man. To whom should be given the

Some Dixon people do
Read the statement that follows.
It's from a Dixon citizen.
Testimony that can be investigated.

Mrs. J. Helfrich, R. R. No. 4, Dixon, Ill., says: "While I never take Doan's Kidney Pills myself I can strongly recommend them and I am glad to confirm the public statement a member of my family gave in their praise some years ago. For a long time this person suffered from irregular action of the kidneys. He also had backaches and found relief only when he used Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Leake Bros. Co.'s store.
This remedy stopped the pain and restored the kidneys to a normal condition."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo,
New York, sole agents for the United States.
Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

IMPORTANCE OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM

The nervous system of the human body is a most delicate machine. It can stand only a certain amount of strain. When too big a load is put upon it, it must as surely fail as an engine will fail to double its capacity.

Many people today are over-worked and over-worried. Many of those who do not over-work go to the other extreme and over-play. The result in either case is nervous breakdown. Can anything be done to remedy such a condition?

Consult Dr. Prettyman, who for more than twenty years has made a specialty of the study and treatment of these conditions. You can see him free of all charge at the Nachusa Hotel, Monday, March 17th.

KNOW HIS RECORD.

Mr. Divorsay—Ah! Julia, dearest, my heart is in your keeping.
Julia Wise—Tush! I'm not running a storage warehouse for damaged goods.

Real Curiosity.

"Why are all those people flocking down to Hiram Hardapple's barn?" asked the old farmer on the hay wagon.
"It's got a curiosity down there," chuckled the village constable.
"That so? What kind of a curiosity is it?"

"Why, it's old red and white Jersey cow. The other night the old critter had the colic and he went down with his lantern to give her a dose of cow medicine. Blamed if he didn't make a mistake and give her a pint of gasoline."

"Do tell! Didn't kill her, did it?"
"No, but by heck, it had a funny effect. Now, instead of going 'Moo-moo' like any other sensible cow, she goes 'Honk-honk' like one of them thar blamed automobiles."—National Monthly.
